Gary / Dave:

Help me understand - this man allegedly commits suicide by jumping off the upper tier of a jail cell block - and apparently the VCSO conducts no death investigation? Do citizens suddenly lose their 14 Amendment rights (US Constitution), when they become inmates at the Volusia County Jail (Fair and Equal Protection / Treatment Under the Law)?

If tomorrow, a 18 year old college student allegedly jumps to his death (suicide) from a high rise condo in un-incorporated Ormond-By-The Sea - can we (the public) expect a VCSO death investigation? If so, then why is Mr. Dellechiaie's life of lesser value?

I am of the opinion - that the Volusia County Sheriff Department is duty bound to conduct an investigation into the events surrounding Mr. Dellechiaie's alleged suicide.

Hopefully there will be at least an autopsy - I believe Florida law calls for it. Apparently this autopsy, and the jail's internal review will be the only investigations into this man's death. Two "investigations" (ME's and Jail) conducted by two divisions of the very same county department - the Volusia County Department of Public Protection. (A department who's scandals just can't seem to stop - beach officers have sex with underage girls,..... correctional officers allegedly lying under oath,..... medical examiner suddenly terminated without apparent cause.....etc..etc.)

Gary, in our opinion, this incident is yet another example of how Florida Model Jail Standards (Since 1996) is failing to protect the citizens of Florida. Florida needs to revert back to the Florida Administrative Code 33-8 jail standards, in which Mr. Dellechiaie's death (and other jail deaths) would have been independently investigated by the State prison inspector.
